Carmel Liquor Case Off Calendar; Trial to Be Reset April 15

TO give attorneys on both sides additional time to prepare voluminous documentary evidence, the famous Carmel "liquor clause" case has been dropped for the time being from the Superior court calender in Salinas. It will come up again on April 15 to be reset. Attorneys will ask that the date of hearing be put well into the future, probably in the summer, in order to assure plenty of time to prepare the case.

The Carmel Development Company, original subdividers of Carmel, are instigators of the suit, which charges that on certain properties which they contend were sold with a restraining clause, liquor is being sold. Attorneys for the plaintiffs, which include several prominent merchants and the owners of the buildings where their stores are located, argue that not all the Development Company lots were sold with the restraining clause, and believe that this fact may invalidate the restriction. In order to prove the case it will be necessary to make a protracted search of records, which may take months.

An organized minority of "drys" in Carmel is understood to have insisted that the Development company take this action, because they came here with the understanding that liquor could never be legally sold in Carmel. With the repeal of prohibition and the wide change in sentiment which has come about in the last few years, local merchants put in retail stocks of liquor in the belief that the clause would never be invoked.

The Development company is represented by a firm of San Francisco attorneys: Morrison, Hohfeld, Forster, Shuman & Clark. Hudson & Martin are attorneys for Mrs. Robert Leidig and Robert C. Storey, defendants; R. H. Ewig is represented by Dan G. Bardin; Wycoff & Gardner, Watsonville attorneys, represent Espindola's.

Chief Norton Makes First Traffic Pinch; Look Who He Got

Allen Griffin was in Carmel Wednesday night, and he was in a hurry. Just at dinner time Carmelites were aroused from their ruminations by a terrific siren-shriek. Rushing out en masse, they discovered the noise was Police Chief Robert Norton in pursuit of his first traffic victim, none other than the Monterey publisher.

Mr. Griffin is scheduled to appear before Judge Wood next Monday to answer to a charge of passing Sunset school at a rate of 45 miles per hour.

Council Adjourns Sans 4 Members

Councilman John Catlin performed solo in the council chambers Wednesday, thereby keeping intact his record for never missing a council meeting. City Clerk Saidee Van Brower duly called the role, and when but one answer of "present" was recorded, the meeting was adjourned, City Attorney Argyll Campbell, Judge Wood, Mr. Rosenblatt and his son, and sundry newspaper reporters did not look sufficiently official to compose a quorum.

Mayor James Thoburn is still holding out for a split in the commissionerships, and as neither Bernard Rowntree or John Catlin is in a compromising mood, the moot commissionership of fire-police has not yet been assigned.

New Rabies Case Calls for Clinic

Another positive case of rabies was reported in Carmel this week by the health department, and the head of another animal which died Monday night at the pound has been sent to University of California for examination. The fact that four positive cases have developed in and near Carmel makes health officials particularly anxious to complete the immunization of Carmel pets. An all-day clinic will be held at the fire house tomorrow, from noon until 6 o'clock.

Thus far this week 494 pets were reported to have been immunized in Carmel, leaving 234, according to the SPCA animal census, to be immunized. Several classes of "conscientious objectors" have been won over to willing cooperation, and it is believed that 100 per cent innoculation may be effected voluntarily.

Conrad Imelman Buys Mrs. Glenn's Interest

Mrs. Grace Glenn, who has been for the past eight years associated with Conrad Imelman in the sportswear shop of that name on Ocean avenue, announced this week the sale of her interest in the shop to Mr. Imelman. Mrs. Glenn is preparing to leave on a vacation trip to Southern California, but will return later to her home in Carmel.

Cy Titus has joined the sales force in Imelman's. He has been a resident of Carmel for about six years and with his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth D. Titus, making his home at Fifth and Monte Verde, the property recently purchased from Mrs. Jean De Yoe.

WOMAN'S CLUB TO MEET MONDAY AFTERNOON

The April monthly meeting of the Woman's Club will be held on Monday, April 1, at 2:30, at the Girl Scout House, Lincoln and Sixth. The meeting will be devoted almost entirely to business matters, but will be followed by the usual social hour and serving of tea.

HARRY NYE RECUPERATING

Harry S. Nye, prominent Carmelite residing at Dolores and Eleventh, is recuperating at Monterey hospital from an operation for appendicitis, which was performed Monday evening.

War Protest Brings Arrest for Students

Dick Criley, Carmel student at U. C., will come up for hearing April 10, as result of his arrest, with 15 other students, for distributing leaflets at Sather Gate last week, calling attention to the proposed "student's strike" in protest to war. An old ordinance prohibiting distribution of hand-bills was invoked against the students, in spite of the fact, Berkeley observers say, that distribution of leaflets at Sather Gate for all sorts of purposes is a hoary University custom. Young Criley is the son of Mrs. Richard Criley of Carmel Highlands.

More serious is the situation of Johnny Rockwell, son of Mrs. Jasmine Rockwell, also caught in the dragnet for distribution of the "inflammatory" literature. He had handed a leaflet to a girl, who dropped it. In stooping to retrieve it for her, he set his foot on the university campus, thereby, in the opinion of officers who promptly nabbed him, violating the strict rule of the university against distributing handbills on the campus. Technically, he may be liable to dismissal from the university.

ON TEACHING PRACTICE

Miss Dorothy Knutsen, student at San Jose state teachers' college, has come to Carmel for her six weeks' teaching practice at Sunset school.

Building Permits In Carmel This Year Total $10,[illegible] Many Alterations

BUILDING permits totalling over $10,000 have been issued in Carmel since Jan. 1, 1935, according to records in the office of City Clerk Saidee Van Brower. This represents not major construction jobs, but a score of smaller projects which indicate considerable activity along the line of alterations and additions. It is regarded by builders as a promising indication of an imminent general building revival. The number of the projects, though the average calls for an expenditure of only about $500 on materials, has spread steady work among construction workers for the past two and a half months.

Exclusive of the small jobs in Carmel are two major building projects on Carmel Point totalling nearly $30,000. Miles Blain is building for Mr. and Mrs. Cooper Anderson a residence at Valley View and Sixteenth, a modernized colonial home for which C. J. Ryland was the architect. It is estimated that the cost will be well over $11,000.

For Mrs. Eva J. Powell of San Francisco the Hugh Comstock firm has designed and is building a $7000 residence, adapted from the Spanish colonial. She expects to make this her permanent home.

One of the more extensive remodel[illegible] now in progress within the [illegible] home of Mr. and Mrs. [illegible], where a second story addition [illegible] being built. Yvonne Ne-vas-Rey, [illegible] recently sold to Noel Sullivan [illegible] property on North Carmino, is building a small studio residence on North Mission, near Forest Hill school. John Belvail is building a small home at the east end of

Other building permits issued: Stella J. Guichard, for remodeling her Dolores street property: Alpha G. Follett, garage and open porch studio, on San Carlos; Louisa Stern, house on Santa Fe; Joseph A. Burge, tool shed and minor improvements, Ocean and San Antonio; Noel Sullivan, additions to house on North Carmelo; Claribell Hydock Zuck, Santa Fe and Fourth, garage and additions; Ralph A. Coote, Santa Fe and Eighth, studio; Mrs. Signe Bauer, Monteverde, shed; Guy H. Smith, Dolores, breakfast room addition and remodeling; S. A. Treyvett, Lincoln, remodelling; Major F. A. Mix, alterations, Second near Carmelo.

In addition to this local activity, the Hugh Comstock firm has the building of a number of new homes in prospect in and around Carmel, Ocean avenue.

NEW HIGHWAY PLANS UNDER DISCUSSION

CARMEL'S "advisory committee," which whipped into shape the SERA projects which the council submitted for approval, and is now considering possible PWA projects, is in the midst of a typically Carmelish delicate situation. It wishes to convey to the County Planning Committee an appreciation of its offer of cooperation in lining up Carmel's traffic outlets, and still not commit itself to a program of building roads so excellent that hordes of sight-seers will be diverted from the new highway into the village. Amid nostalgic murmurings for the days when Perry Newberry held out for a toll-gate at the top of the hill, the committee met Monday afternoon to discuss a lay-out which Reeve Conover, engineer for the county planning committee, presented to them Saturday afternoon.

The city map on which Mr. Conover blacked-in Carmel's main traffic outlets, was prepared for the eyes of PWA engineers, who are more interested in the technicalities of how many traffic lanes are required by a community of a given size, than in the individualistic attitude of the community itself. For this reason, some of the suggestions in the "pattern for a ten-year objective"—the word "plan" being anathema in Carmel, gave Carmel's committee the heebie-jeebies.

Patiently preparing for a howl, whatever they recommend, the committee passed favorably on the suggestion of opening Junipero straight through to the county road, to carry south-bound traffic away from San Carlos and Sunset school. They agreed on the necessity to widen the curve at the foot of Camino del Monte, on the road which enters Carmel from the north through Carmel Woods, and on the need for widening portions of the San Carlos street entrance from the north.

The county plan, of which the Carmel project would be an extension, embodies easy and logical connection by eliminating curves, with Carmel streets at the city limits. Most extensive project in this vicinity is widening of the road near the Mission, and provision of extra parking space.

GOVERNMENT IS TOPIC

At the home of Mrs. J. B. Adams on Carmelo the government and its operation section of the League of Women Voters will hold a meeting. Mrs. Carl Voss of Salinas is chairman, and the discussion of the tax question to which this group is devoting itself at present will be continued.

Ella Winter Speaks on Program at Confab With Secretary Perkins

SPEAKING on "Migratory Workers of California" Ella Winters was on the Monday afternoon program of the four-state Regional Labor Conference over which Secretary of Labor Perkins is presiding in San Francisco. As a result of considererable correspondence between Madame Secretary, Lincoln Steffens and Miss Winter, the two outstanding Carmelites were both invited to participate in the conference. Mr. Steffens was unable to make the trip because of poor health, which has confined him to his room for several months.

As a theme of the day's program was the necessity to improve conditions among migratory laborers, Miss Winter pointed out that activities of the migratory workers, which have led to their being labeled "red" have had just that objective, and that society's response, in the form of a black-jack, was not of material assistance.

"We who are interested in securing fair play, decent living conditions and a living wage for the migratory agricultural workers are also labeled 'agitators' and 'reds,'" Miss Winter said, "but we are resigned to this and will not relinquish our efforts." From the response to her talk, and remarks made after the meeting even by the employers of labor, the Carmel writer and lecturer judged that there is more sympathy with the plight of the migratory farm worker than might be supposed.

Myrto Childe, also known in Carmel, was another speaker on the topic of unemployment insurance for women. William J. McFadden, of Salinas, representative of the fruit and vegetable pickers, was well received.

Will J. French, regional compliance director for NRA presided at the meetings, which over 1000 delegates attended. After the morning session, devoted to discussion of work hours, wages, compensation, industrial homework and child labor, there was a luncheon meeting at Hotel Whitcomb. Migratory labor, health insurance, old age security and public employment agencies were taken up at the afternoon session, followed by a dinner at the Women's City Club.

Secretary Perkins had words of commendation for most California labor laws, but said that their most serious deficiency is in the field of migratory labor.

Russian Virtuoso to Appear Here In April

A program by the noted Sascha Wolas, Russian violin virtuoso now in San Francisco, will be the first of the regular weekly Friday matinees at Carmel theatre, taking place on a date in April to be announced. The series, which will embrace music, drama, dance and foreign-language films, is announced to be continuous throughout the spring and summer. The Wolas recital will be the first concert in the former "Golden Bough" since that of the Pro Arte Quartet some years ago.

Tickets for these events will be on sale in the theatre lobby during motion picture hours.

Phone Company to Hold Open House Again This Evening

Several hundred Carmelites took advantage of the "open house" invitation extended by the Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Company this week and saw how "the wheels go round" in the local office. The local business was open from office between the hours of 1 and 8:30 p. m. Wednesday and Thursday and will today be open at the same hours for all those who wish to visit the plant.

Saving In Expense of Street Lights Reported

Reduction of approximately ten per cent in street lighting rates recently announced by the Pacific Gas & Electric Company will save $81.60 annually for Carmel and a total of $1,143.96 for the three towns on the peninsula.

T. W. Snell, division manager for the utility company with headquarters at Salinas, has sent letters to the city council of each of the three municipalities informing them of the amounts they may expect to save under the new schedule. They are as follows:

Carmel, $81.60 per year; Monterey, $689.98 per year; Pacific Grove, $372.48 per year.

The estimates are on the basis of the number of lamps now in service. The new schedule applies to company-owned street lighting systems in incorporated areas throughout P. G. & E. territory. It was made effective March 1.

Next Attraction at Gallery Is Viola D'Amore

That sweet and novel instrument, the ancient viola d'amore, is the next musical offering of the Denny-Watrous Gallery, scheduled for Saturday evening, April 6. The artist is the distinguished Alix Young Maruchess, who so charmed her audience in Carmel a year ago.

The viola d'amore or the "viol of love" is the sweetest and most loved of all that group of stringed instruments known in literature from ancient to modern time as the "viols." The viols have been immortalized by poet, painter and musician; the very name conjures in one's mind fairy sounds of indescribable loveliness. The viola d'amore most of all possesses this loveliness, and under the skilled and enchanted fingers of Alix Young Maruchess it transports the listeners into a far-off time.

Those who heard Mme. Maruchess last season will not willingly miss the opportunity to again hear her play on her two instruments—the viola and the viola d'amore.

No Slackers Among Artists on Art Projects Under SERA Plan

IN the six months since it was approved and the work started, Monterey peninsula's unique SERA art project or series of projects, has assumed major proportions. The work is now far enough along to show that this region has secured results far exceeding in intrinsic value the public funds expended. Nearest to completion is the redecoration of the Presidio theater. A half-day's prowl among the studios where major murals for Monterey high school are being executed shows them far enough along to indicate their final form.

This is one SERA project which the most exacting critic must admit to have more than attained all possible objectives, provided he is willing to concede that art has a valid place in life. The working corps has included about 30 artists and 20 artists' helpers. Without exception their enthusiasm has been so intense, their appreciation of an opportunity to turn their gifts to the benefit of the community so deep, that they have thrown themselves into the work with utmost ardour. It is hard to measure by mundane standards the value of their work. It may give some indication, however, to say that whereas they have been paid on the basis of an hour or two of work per day, they have worked, in the white heat of composition, six and eight hours a day, of course without expecting additional pay. To save money for the projects' sponsors, they have bought, instead of regulation artists' materials, raw duck—which in this case is not something to eat but something to paint upon—and sized it themselves. Through it all they have manifested an inspiring esprit de corps; temperament has been conspicuous by its absence, and everyone who has been thrown officially in contact with the project has remarked that this highly skilled, sensitive group has been the easiest and pleasantest of all SERA groups to work with.

The fact that the project has been more or less "under the gun" has certainly not simplified matters, but it has not ruffled the artists. At the end of last month, when the whole SERA program was for a time hanging in the balance, due to doubt as to continuance of funds, the artists were advised to "rush to completion" whatever they had under way. That is not an atmosphere conducive to best creative work, but like good sports they "rushed," and though the pressure has eased a bit now, it is probable that another month or two will see the work nearing completion.

The muralists are working under particularly difficult conditions. With their great canvases set up in tiny studios they "do it with mirrors." Not having the space to step back and get a broad view of what they are doing, they look into mirrors for the distance and depth so necessary for the proper perspective on work of this sort.

Burton Boundey is working on a scene reproducing histroic life about the old customs house in the Spanish period. It is a simple, forthright composition, full of life, sun and exquisite bright color, with Spanish ladies, horsemen, a Yankee prospector with his burros, children, dogs, fighting cocks, even a cat. The process of preparing to paint a mural is no less arduous than the work itself; it helps to show why such work often occupies an artist for a year or more, and the difficulties of meeting a dead-line.

There was the purely subjective, imaginative part first, the decision of what sort of scene should be painted, and the approval of sponsors and artists' advisory committee to be secured. The composition was then sketched, carefully to scale of one inch to the foot—this was done three times as the idea matured. There are 19 figures in this mural, and individual sketches were made of each in its appropriate setting. The artists' helpers came into the picture here, to do the necessary research and produce careful and accurate drawings of costume details. Then all were redrawn to scale and cut out so that they could be moved about on a large crayon tentative drawing, to see how the figures could be most effectively and logically grouped. Then after sizing the great mural canvas, 9 by 13 feet, the artist was ready to proceed with the "real" work.

August Gay, in his studio in the old Stevenson house, is working on a beautiful and harmonious composition showing a kaleidoscope of Monterey history, from the adobe makers to the beautiful new bridge on the Carmel-San Simeon highway. He has mastered obvious difficulties of a composition of this sort; he has disciplined a plethora of material into a design rhythmic as to form and color.

A similarly difficult problem is being solved by Howard Jackson, who is indicating the wealth and grandeur of this region in a suggestive composition using scenes of industry against a background showing its native beauty. His method is modern, and a composition of great interest is taking form.

James Fitzgerald is working out a similar problem in an entirely different manner. In his mural interest is concentrated in the foreground, in a frieze-like procession of fishers carrying a gracefully draped net. Other Monterey industries are indicated in the background. His original plan for the high school library mural was a study of sea and wind-blown cypress, in full sun, but this was abandoned because the unsettled weather this winter gave him insufficient time to study his subject-matter in sunlight.

Sponsor of the murals is the Monterey High School; all the art projects have been carried out under one supervision, a "supervised corps" plan rather than a "unit project" plan. A committee of artists, including Francis McComas, Armin Hansen and E. Charlton Fortune acts in an advisory capacity and passes on the artistic quality of the work. Mrs. Nelly Montague is supervisor.

Master Magician Comes Tomorrow

Great mysteries will be unfolded and ghosts will walk tomorrow evening in the Denny-Watrous Gallery, when Francisco and his magic show is presented to a Carmel audience.

Francisco has traveled throughout America with his show. He promises to perform feats from all parts of the world, including the Hindu turban trick as he saw it presented in India. There will be illusions in which rabbits and birds appear and disappear before the eyes of the spectators; escapes from mail bags and trunks; and tricks with coins, silks, fire and smoke.

Francisco will also present his "spirit" show, in which he seems to have an army of spirits at his command, for they write on slates for him, read sealed letters and whisper their contents to him, toss bells out of cabinets, drive nails and make themselves generally useful about the place.

Herb Garden Law and Lure Subject

"The Law and Lure of the Herb Garden" was the subject of the talk made by Mrs. Helen Lyman of Oakland, for the Woman's club garden section at its meeting March 21 at the home of the Misses Pierce, Lincoln and Eighth.

"As far back as the eighth century," said Mrs. Lyman, "there were books on herbs, which were used as remedies and charms. The Chinese have long used herbs for medicine. Egypt used herbs for domestic purposes, as did Mexico under the Aztec rule, and ancient Greece. In Saxon times herbs were used extensively for medicinal purposes. In Queen Elizabeth's reign there was scarcely a garden that did not have its herb patch. The North American Indians also understood the beneficial use of herbs as remedies, and the Pilgrim Fathers brought with them their packets of seeds and started their herb gardens in New England.

"The growing of herbs has been neglected for many years, but is coming back in popularity. Herbs are best grown in sandy soil; can be propagated easily from cuttings, or in some cases by division. The plants must be in full sun to prosper."

Mrs. Lyman said the three best methods for grouping herbs are in a rock garden, along both sides of a garden path, or in a little Shakespeare garden. Herbs are sun-worshippers, and a rock garden is an ideal place. using good-sized rocks rather than many smaller ones. The French are past-masters in the art of using herbs in cooking, and thoroughly understand their worth. Gardens may come, and gardens may go, said the speaker, but the herb garden goes on forever.

Pacific Grove Group Foreign Missionary Society Celebrates

Celebrating the founding of the Methodist Women's Foreign Missionary Society, the Pacific Grove group held its March meeting in Holman's solarium, Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. C. E. Fogg led the devotionals and Mrs. Anna Reyburn was in charge of the program. The theme of the session was "Japan," Mrs. C. E. Draper gave a talk, "Japanese Women at Home." A dialogue, "How It All Began," was presented next by Mrs. Anna Reyburn and Mrs. Romaine Brazelton. A lovely Japanese song was rendered by Mrs. T. Kagiyama. Mrs. Winifred Cummings and Mrs. L. D. Parchman entertained with a dialogue—"Friend." "Beautiful Japan" was given its full measure of loveliness in a solo of that title by Miss Dorothy Greene. A song sung often at Kagawa's meetings in Japan was presented in a duet by Betty Draper and Doris Cook, "Kingdom of God Movement."

Those participating in the typical Japanese tea, served by members of the society colorfully attired in Japanese kimonas were:

Guests of the Society—Miss Ida Grimes, Mrs. Lois Schneider, president of the Methodist Missionary Society in Salinas; Miss Anna Gibbons, Mrs. Oscar Ferguson, Mrs. Romaine Brazelton, Mrs. Ada Taylor, Mrs. Elgin Hurlbutt, Mrs. Byron Reddington, Miss Jones, Dr. J. H. N. Williams, Miss Betty Draper, Miss Doris Cook, Mrs. George Turner, Mrs. C. E. Draper, Miss Dorothy Greene, Miss Sugano, Mrs. T. Kagiyama, and Mrs. Mary E. Leak.

Members of the Society—Miss Ella Holbrook, Mrs. Clara Ziegler, Mrs. Will Wright, Mrs. Anna Reyburn, President of the Pacific Grove Methodist Missionary Society; Mrs. W. C. Cummings, Mrs. Alfred Jones, Miss Isabella Thayer, Mrs. Lillian Banta, Mrs. Florence Paul, Mrs. Alma Lee, Mrs. F. Manhire, Miss Alice Sabine, Miss Ida Sabine, Mrs. Harriet Walldron, Mrs. D. N. Readers' Reaction

Editor The Carmel "Pine Cone":

As president of the Fresno Players and a summer resident of Carmel, I am much interested in the comments of your reviewer on the recent performance at Carmel of "Another Language."

We are all so pleased that your critic liked the production. We knew, of course, that Mr. Kuster's Fresno cast had worked very hard to put over this difficult play, but we were surprised and delighted to see the production so highly praised in your columns as "the best play of the season."

Though regrettnig the unexpectedly small attendance at Carmel Playhouse, we congratulate The Pine Cone on its courage in coming forward and condemning the local dissenting few who of late years have planted the seeds of jealousy and dissatisfaction in the dramatic interests of Carmel.

For the last ten years I have spent my summers in Carmel, as have many of my friends. Some of us have taken part in many of the summer plays and are familiar with the situation; and it seems to me that the attitude of some of your townspeople has done, from an outsider's viewpoint, great harm to Carmel. To us it seems incredible that your representative people, especially your hotel men and merchants desiring summer trade, should be so apathetic about a matter so vitally affecting the town.

Even if they are not theatregoers themselves, they must realize that the decline in Carmel's former reputation for fine drama reacts unfavorably on its general standing as a place of unique interest and charm.

The films are a necessity; we are grateful for them, but to those of who love the old order of the theater nothing can substitute for our hunger for fine voices, soft lights, the smell of grease-paint and the charm of rubbing elbows with the players at some happy little gathering after their work is done—and all this has been so closely associated with our picture of Carmel art—its people.—Don't spoil it, please!

We in Fresno are glad to have your Mr. Kuster as our director, if only for the short season he can spare us. It is generally felt that the San Joaquin Valley would gain much if he could be moved to transfer the entire Golden Bough enterprise to Fresno instead of restoring it to Carmel. We believe, to quote your reviewer, that it is "strange that the man who had made Carmel known to the outside world as an important dramatic center is a prophet without honor in his own community."

Whatever the reason for Carmel's failure to attend "Another Language," you may be sure that when the Carmel group plays their forthcoming guest production of "By Candlelight" in Fresno, a hearty welcome and a splendid audience will greet them.

ALICE MEDLAM SMITH.

Fresno, Calif, March 25.

THE WILL OF THE PEOPLE

Editor the Carmel Pine Cone:

I am wondering why the mayor did not exercise his prerogative of appointing a police-commissioner at once.

The delay—as per usual—invited his voters to take a stand, and their choice, through petitions already presented seems to be overwhelmingly for Mr. Rowntree. I may be mistaken, but, I am still of the opinion, that we seat a council in order to carry out the will of the people.

JOHN BATHEN.

TAKE A HUMANE WAY

Editor, The Carmel Pine Cone:

In a splendid article in your paper under date of Feb. 22, 1935, which has just reached our headquarters, your feature writer, Lois Collins Palmer, states that "a pogrom of cats is imminent" in your community. Personal advices are to the same effect.

It seems incredible that in a place which is renowned for its culture and high standards of citizenship the plan as stated that "men and boys will be out with guns, shooting them (the cats) on sight, and reveling in it" would for a moment be tolerated by your residents and endorsed or ordered by your city council.

There are decent ways of handling the problem of over-population of cats without recourse to anything so inhuman as a campaign of cold-blooded maiming and slaughtering, with the demoralizing aftermath upon men and boys who gloatingly vent their hatred upon defenseless victims.

How will the thousands of citizens in other parts of a state and nation, who early in April will participate in a country-wide celebration of "Be Kind to Animals" anniversary, view this orgy of killing which allegedly may take place if it has not already taken place in Carmel?

There are state humane officers who if called in to help in a civilized manner could handle your problem without disgrace to the community. As a leader of thought in your town, can you not champion the honorable course to take and spare the criticism of your governing board which is bound to follow?

In conclusion I wish to congratulate you most heartily upon having such a gifted writer as Miss Palmer on your staff.

The above protest is concurred in by the board of trustees of the Latham Founadtion.

WHY A QUAKER?

Editor The Carmel Pine Cone:

Since some one has taken the trouble to advertise that I am a Quaker, there have been many questions asked. What are the Quakers? What do they believe?

I am a birthright member of the Society of Friends (commonly called Quakers) and I have never resigned because I believe it is the most liberal of all the religious sects, allowing the greatest freedom of individual belief.

Of course there are a great many writings by Friends but the Society, as such, does not have a creed as do other religious bodies, to which one must subscribe in order to join. To illustrate, a Friend who was often requested to confer with applicants for membership, stated that his main objective was to learn why the applicant wished to become a member of the Society and the application was not likely to receive favorable consideration if the applicant had any other reason for wishing to join than that of believing he could do more good in the world or be more useful to mankind than if he was not a member.

There are Friends of all kinds and shades of religious belief. Probably the basic beliefs are that there isn't and should not be any intermediary between man and his God and that there is an inner light that lighteth every man born into the world.

The absence of form, ceremony and rituals, is to the outsider, the most noticeable difference between Quakers and other religious denominations. The Society of Friends should not be judged by any one Quaker, neither should any Friend be judged by comparison to any other one or to the Society as a whole.

Studying Shells Proves Interesting Hobby; Myrle Sprague Collection

By DORIS COOK

"THE variety and abundance of marine life in the different localities is determined by several different factors—the strength of currents, temperature of water, presence or absence of certain foods, presence or absence of rocks, and muddy or sandy bottom," states Miss Myrle Sprague of Pacific Grove, who is well versed on this subject, as she has been collecting shells for over five years, and has one of the most extensive shell collections in this locality. Miss Sprague has earned distinction on the peninsula by her enthusiasm for her hobby and the intelligence with which she has pursued it. When asked why she began this fascinating pastime of being a conchologist, Miss Sprague said she started in 1928 but how or why, she didn't know. At that time she knew of no one who had a collection of any kind.

Meets Another Collector

Meeting Mrs. Fackenthal, who has lived and collected on the peninsula for many years, about a year later, she obtained much help along the shell line. Mrs. Fackenthal has the best and most complete collection of Monterey Bay shells on the peninsula. Later Mrs. Fackenthal introduced Miss Sprague to Mrs. Ida S. Oldroid, curator of Stanford geological museum; and these two, by recommending Miss Sprague for membership in the American Malacological Union, made it possible for her to become one of this group of scientists, authors and concologists of the United States. This body meets every year in a different state and usually has an attendance of 40 members out of 225. Miss Sprague attended the last meeting, held at Stanford last summer. She reports an exceedingly enlightening conference on marine life.

Most of the members told of their experiences in gathering shells and about the different habits of the shells they had come across. They had these discussions for three days illustrated by lantern slides of the marine life talked of. The fourth day was set aside for collecting. California has the largest number of members, totaling 39 and New York comes next with 36. Miss Sprague is the youngest member, being only a high school student. Professor J. Henderson, of the Colorado University, is the president of the union for 1934-35. Some of the best known concologists who attended last summer's session were: Mrs. Julie Ellen Rogers who wrote "The Shell Book"; J. L. Daily, who is revising Josiah Keep's book, "The West Coast Shells"; Dr. Harold Heath, who, with Miss Sprague, represented the peninsula; Mrs. Ida S. Oldroid, curator of Stanford geological department; Dr. F. M. McJarland, head of the California Academy of Science of San Francisco. The meeting next year is to be held in the Museum of Science in Buffalo, New York; and for the following year it has been partially decided upon to go to St. Petersburg, Florida, where they will have access to a dredging boat and an island.

Talks to Girls

Miss Sprague gave a highly appreciated talk to the Girls' League of the Pacific Grove High School on marine life last week which occasioned this interview with her on that subject. She declares that Monterey, Pacific Grove and Carmel were once known to the world as the collectors' paradise because of our large variety and abundance of marine life. This distinction is due mainly to the granite rocks which form our coast line and to the warm Japanese current which often comes into the bay, bringing with it many rare forms of marine life. Our former mayor, Miss Julia Platt, said that she first heard of Pacific Grove while studying biology in Germany. of our marine life and showed them A. Pillsbury in 1929 took three films throughout the East. Everywhere he was received with great enthusiasm. However, according to Miss Sprague, due to the raids made by foreigners, our marine life has been disappearing rapidly. A few years ago the city, influenced by the pleas of Professor McGinitie, found it necessary to pass a law prohibiting the removal of marine life between China Point and the Lighthouse reservation. This stopped the taking of limpets, sea urchins, and other mollusks for food, but it is of great disadvtange to the collector because there are several beaches in that area that are excellent collecting grounds.

Miss Sprague suggests that the best times to go collecting are at low tide and after or during a storm. During a storm the currents are strong and tear the shells from the bottom of the ocean and throw them up on the beach. Often shells from other localities—sometimes as far away as Florida are thrown upon our beaches.

Miss Sprague is the creator of the Chestnut Burr Museum on Chestnut street, Pacific Grove. She started this four years ago. She exhibits 500 specimens of shells, a number of preserved sea animals, a small collection of foreign and old coins and odds and ends of interesting relics. Visitors are welcome and are sure to spend a profitable time among the "wonders of the deep."

EMPHAESTIC ART CLASSES MAY BE FORMED HERE

For anyone interested, Otto Koehler, exponent of emphaestic art, will arrange courses, either private or in classes. He stresses the fact that modeling in metal requires not only good training and ability, but also a patient skill and intensity of interest such as no other work requires. There is no well-prepared way and outline of study, as in other art forms. For this reason emphaestic teaches a student to depend upon himself alone. Mr. Koehler says a thorough knowledge of the handling of the material not only satisfies those who like to build with their hands, but also those who crave to bring their inmost thoughts into concrete form.

Death claimed another old Carmelite this week, when Marcy S. Woods, an artist once prominently associated with the Carmel Art Association, resident of the village and of the Mesa, was killed in an automobile accident near Reno. He was 48 years of age, and had been making his home recently at Stockton, having left the peninsula about four years ago. A Miss Florence Ossman of Reno was driving the car which skidded on icy pavement and turned over, bringing death to Woods and injury to two others.

Rapt and Pensive Audience Hears Budapest Quartet In Final Concert

By THELMA B. MILLER

MUSIC in its most austere form was presented at Sunset auditorium Saturday evening, when the Budapest String Quartet gave the last of Carmel Music Society's winter series of concerts. The program was one to which the audience listened rapt and pensive. The music had dignity, impeccable taste and quality. As is essential to good chamber music, personality was subjugated entirely in the interest of the music's integrity; and four instruments played as one well-drilled unit, no one was more excellent than the other three. Though the smooth mellowness of the cello at times commanded particular attention, there was no mitigation of the humility with which the excellent artist kept himself in the background, bent his gifts, as did the other three, to interpret a four-fold score.

Something of the exquisite detail of chamber music is lost in an auditorium as large as Sunset's. It is a trifle vague and far away; it is better, as its name indicates, in a smaller room.

The program arrangement was perfect for the material at hand. The simple formality of Haydn bloomed into the greater melodic richness of the Schubert and then expanded into the majesty of Beethoven. Like a blooming tree; graceful first in its pattern of unadorned branches, gloriously in flower in early spring; rich with verdant leaves in summer.

Chamber music has its own literature, almost exclusive from that presented by other performing groups or soloists. It is exacting; it must be flawless. Perhaps that is why there are comparatively few groups devoted to it. Each player must be an artist of first rank, yet must have that great capacity to think of himself as only one unit of the group.

The players of string quartets remain almost anonymous in the minds of their hearers; they are known as an organization rather than as individual artists.

All of which compose an exacting set of requirements which only a great musician, great in spirit as well as in native endowment and training, can fulfill in his service to a singularly pure form of music.

The Budapest Quartet consists of Josef Roisman, first violinist; Alexander Schneider, second violinist; Stephen Ipoli, violist; and Mischa Schneider, cellist.

Japanese Pastor Is Missionary Speaker

After S. Asano, new pastor of the Monterey Japanese church, talked for three-quarters of an hour in his native tongue, as he has no English, K. Yahanda, in Oxford English, repeated the gist of his remarks, at the monthly meeting of Carmel Missionary society held Tuesday afternoon at All Saints' parish house. Rev. Asano devoted his talk to Kagawa, the great Christian leader in Japan, worker for peace and for better understanding between the various Christian denominations. Living for 14 years in the slums of Tokio, carrying on religious and welfare work, he undermined his health, but attained a personal following which regards him practically as a saint.

Also on the program appeared Mrs. Gertrude Bardarson in a vocal solo; "My King," accompanied by Mrs. Ruth Sessink.

REPRESENTATIVE VOTE OUT TODAY IN SCHOOL ELECTION

Indications early today were that a good vote would be cast in the school election despite the fact that Adolph G. Hanke is unopposed for trustee. The vote is one of confidence in the candidate. The polls, located at the Carmel fire house for Precincts 1 and 2, and at Sunset school for Precincts 3 and 4, will be open until 7 o'clock tonight.

DEATH OF JOHN HILLIARD VERIFIED THROUGH LETTER

David Alberto has received from Mrs. Hilda Cator a letter which verified the death of her father, John Hilliard, of which Carmelites learned in a round-about way last week. Hilliard's chief claim to fame in Carmel rose from his association with the Forest Theater, for which he produced plays, and acted in plays, from the time of his coming here in 1911 until 1919, when he left. He came here just after finishing a book in collaboration with Grace Sartwell Mason, then Mrs. Redfern Mason. The Masons and the Hilliards had a joint household here for a time.

Miss E. Morgan Will Entertain La Collectas

Miss E. Morgan will entertain La Collecta club at its next regular meeting, April 3, at which the speaker will be Mrs. C. E. Newton, who will discuss "Early Days in Iowa." Roll call will be answered by California wild flowers.

The last meeting was a St. Patrick's day program at the home of Mrs. Myrtle Hoffman, with a program in keeping with the spirit of the day, and with a "ship-load" of favors from the Emerald Isle distributed among the 16 members and two visitors present.

He announced a meeting to be held next Wednesday evening—at 7:30 o'clock at the Pacific Grove Boy Scout Hall for the purpose of organizing a peace club in Pacific Grove.

"Successful Negroes," the topic of a recent study program taken up by the Muricata club, was enlarged upon by Mrs. Robert Dexter in a meeting of that group at her home on Lighthouse avenue Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Charlotte Reeve Conover of Dayton, Ohio, the author of the book, "Dayton's Saint and Prophet," dealing with the lives of well-known negroes of that city, is Mrs. Dexter's sister. The book furnished a delightful afternoon of reading of excerpts by the hostess. Carl Laurence Dunbar was given prominence, as also was Dr. William Burns, both negroes of note. Tea was served to Mesdames J. J. Huston, James L. MacKarcher, Charles E. Draper, Dan J. Leary, Flora Philbrick, Fred Nybro, Dexter Rogers, Winifred Cummings, R. L. Robinson, A. E. Priddy, T. H. Easter Exhibit of Paintings Will Show Josephine Culbertson's Work

NEARLY 30 years ago, Miss Josephine Culbertson, with her lifelong friend, Miss Ida M. Johnson, came to Carmel at the invitation of Frank Devendorf to become, after Sidney Yard, Carmel's first resident artists. Miss Johnson passed away in 1931; Miss Culbertson, now in her 83rd year, is the object of particularly tender and prideful regard of the entire village. This feeling was given expression in a recent morning service at Community Church, when Rev. Melvin C. Dorsett dedicated his talk to her, on the theme of nature's beauty at this season, and the manner in which Miss Culbertson has exemplified the continuation of abundant life into the declining years. It is for her scrupulous and exquisite paintings of California wild flowers that Miss Culbertson is best known, and a number of her paintings were on display at the church.

To Hold Exhibit

On April 19 and 20, the two days before Easter, Miss Culbertson will hold at her studio home at Lincoln and Seventh, her first exhibit in some time of her flower paintings. This will represent her newer work, and will be an occasion for pride of her innumerable Carmel friends and many who will make their annual Easter pilgrimage to the village. She will be assisted in receiving by Mrs. Louise Hasty.

It was in 1906 that Miss Johnson and Miss Culbertson left New York and came to settle in the charming rustic studio home which Mr. Devendorf built for them at Lincoln and Ocean, where the library now stands. For many years this establishment was a center of social and artistic life, and no visitor considered that he had seen Carmel without a visit to that characteristic institution, the studio of Miss Johnson and Miss Culbertson.

Problem of Youngsters

Teaching, painting, receiving and serving tea each afternoon, participating in all community activities, these two energetic women still had time to turn their attention to the problems of Carmel's exuberant youngsters. This was long before the day of Boy Scouts, and there was a need for some concerted program for the boys. They organized, and maintained for 15 years the Boys' Club which met weekly in their home, played games and conducted their own business meetings. This provided an interest and occupied the time of such mischievous lads as Bob Norton, Don Hale, Winsor Josselyn, Franklin Murphy, Richard Boke, Richard Criley, Gordon Campbell, James Hopper, John Rockwell, Waldo Hicks, Billy Judson, Harry Arcourt, Bertie Comstock, Billy Herron, Joe Mora, David Prince, Cedric Rowntree, Wesley Dickinson, Martin, Teddie, Glenn and Dale Leidig, the three Wermuth brothers, and numerous others.

In spite of an automobile accident several years ago from which she has never fully recovered, Miss Culbertson not only continues to paint, but to participate in the activities of church, missionary society, and the Woman's Club, for which she put on one of the current events section programs this winter. She is a continuous marvel and inspiration to her younger friends, and there is a quality of youthful freshness and delicacy in her painting which baffles analysis. She has a number of new studies in the making now which will be completed in time for the April exhibition.

Mrs. Louise Hasty makes her home with Miss Culbertson. She thinks and speaks of Miss Culbertson as her aunt; most of Carmel has forgotten that Mrs. Hasty was really the niece of Miss Johnson. The two artists were so considered as a unit, and Miss Culbertson was such an integral part of "the family" that Mrs. Hasty and her kinsfolk have almost forgotten, too, that she is not linked by blood-ties.

Among Monterey Peninsula people having entries in the San Francisco dog show were Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Jacott, Marion Kingsland, Dr. and Mrs. E. F. Kehr and Miss Gladys M. Cheseborough.

Laura Dierssen Finds New York Is Diverting

Miss Laura Dierssen writes from New York, which has been her headquarters during her winter in the east, of most interesting experiences with Miss Florence Locke, remembered here for her "Ellen Terry Lectures." Miss Locke has been most successful in her recitals, 10 in New York, in Boston, at Wellesley, last week at the White House and one in the Shakespeare theater in connection with the Folger Library in Washington.

At the White House, where Miss Dierssen accompanied her, Miss Locke gave Amy Lowell's "Hedge Island" and at the Folger Library, she gave one of Ellen Terry's lectures, "Shakespeare's Heroines." This was an exclusive affair, those invited being guests of Mrs. Folger, and having the privilege of going into the vaults where the original Shakespearean manuscripts are kept.

Miss Locke has sailed for a series of lectures in England, Scotland and Ireland, returning next fall, when Carmel will have the pleasure of hearing her again. Miss Dierssen expects to return to her home here about May 15.

Mrs. Clark Brockway has returned from San Francisco where she passed several days.

Better Business for 1935, Says Shell Co. Chief

"Be ready for more business in 1935."

This was the encouraging message received here from W. P. Durkee, Jr., marketing vice president of Shell Oil Company, by L. Mattrocce, local manager for Shell.

"People have money and are not afraid to spend it," Durkee wrote. "Shell touring service is receiving more requests for maps and travel information than ever before."

Among the reasons cited in Durkee's memorandum for Shell's confidence in 1935 are the January automobile production of 350,000 cars, the biggest January since 1929; new car registrations in January nearly double those of the same month a year ago; and a skyrocketing jump of 47% in January tourist travel as compared with January, 1934.

Durkee also revealed that Shell, confident that business is going to be better this year than for many seasons past, has authorized one of the most aggressive advertising and sales promotion programs in the company's history.

SENSE OR NONSENSE

By BERNARD ROWNTREE

DID you ever see a tug-of-war? You were interested to see which team was the strongest or the cleverest, and it never occurred to you that it was anything but good, clean sport.

If, instead of announcing themselves as competing teams, they had proclaimed that they were both endeavoring to travel in the same direction, would you have believed them, or thought they had gone insane?

Supposing you saw a man with a horse hitched to the front of his wagon and another horse, facing in the opposite direction, hitched to the back of the wagon, and the driver alternately whipping one horse and then the other, would you have any confidence he would travel very fast or far?

The California State Highway Department is advocating that all county roads be turned over to the state, the main argument apparently being a saving in taxes in addition to better and standardized construction and maintenance. Probably all this is true but the large saving will come through a lowered payroll due to less men being required.

Here we have another case of a governmental body trying to move in opposite directions, trying to cut down expenses by more efficient methods which mean less men employed and at the same time endeavoring to find more ways to raise money to put men back to work on relief jobs.

Remember the question, "Have you stopped beating your wife?" and the immediate command to answer yes or no?

It is not every question that can be answered with a simple yes or no and if the answers are confined to such single affirmatives or negatives, the results may be misleading or untruthful.

Dunlap, in his "Civilized Life," states that everyone would choose annihilation if compelled to decide between that and living life over again exactly as it has been lived up to the present moment. Dr. F. L. Wells proved to his satisfaction that Dunlap was wrong by the apparent simple plan of a questionnaire which admitted only the choice of total annihilation or repeating the life lived without being allowed to profit by any experience of the former life and then to be given the same choice of repeating the same life or annihilation.

Did Dr. Wells really prove that people would prefer to live the same life over again than to be totally annihilated here and now? Without knowing it, he probably proved that most of us have forgotten the disagreeable experiences. That we have wanted to forget them. Even when we do speak of those we remember, we endeavor to minimize them by ridicule or pretended amusement.

As no opportunity was given to those answering to state their feelings regarding annihilation, it is likely that many stated their preference to repeat their past performance through fear, for mankind hates the thought of ending his existence so that he has invented all sorts of plans to "carry on," such as a future life and through his own offspring.

It would be interesting to ask us to answer the question for others. Those of us who have seen the life lived by thousands in tenements and slums, by office workers in minor positions, by sales girls in stores, by factory, mine and sweat shop employees, would have no hesitancy in saying they would be better off annihilated than compelled to live such a life a second time.

Presidio Theater Newly Decorated

Almost unrecognizable in its new dress is the Presidio theater, which, as an SERA project is now entirely redecorated, with only a last few finishing touches to be added. A color scheme of blue and cream has been followed; the effect is at once restful and faintly glamorous. Along the side walls 12 heraldic panels, representing regimental coats of arms, have been painted by Max Jene, who also executed the decoration, in military motif, for the face of the balcony. He was assisted by Florence Dominy. Bill Kneass' great gilded eagle, a wood-carving, is now in place over the procenium arch.

The new theater doors have called for redoing of the entire front of the building, in keeping. The door was made, and embellished with intricate carved panels, by Carlos Ayala. He was doing road-work for SERA until some one discovered that he was a highly skilled wood-carver, trained in the government schools of Mexico. He was transferred to the art project, and many who have seen the doors pronounce them one of the most beautiful and valuable products of the art project.

Lester Hale, professional decorator, provided the technical knowledge which "pulled together" the entire rehabilitory project into its present unified whole.

Nine large easel paintings for the officers' club at the presidio are nearing completion; one of army maneuvers, by Charles Bradford Hudson; one of the color guard, by Henrietta Shore, and one of the recreation hall, against its background of sunny green hills over which cloud shadows drift, by Charlotte Morgan. George Kotch is doing three hunting scenes for the dining-room, and a magnificent trio is being done by George Seidneck, portraits of the three Spanish military leaders who originally landed at Monterey.

Still to be done are murals and decorative design for the walls and stairways of the new recreation center; and wood decorations for the windows and doors. All the presidio art work is being done in moveable form, in case the government should at any time abandon the old post building and rebuild or rehabilitate them.

ALEX BULLOCK, STAR POLO PLAYER, INJURED IN MATCH

Treacherous footing at the Del Monte polo field Sunday led to the serious injury of Alex Bullock, hard-hitting Santa Barbara polo player, who suffered a broken shoulder when his horse fell and rolled on him during a game between Del Monte and Santa Barbara fours.

Bullock, playing for Del Monte, was unconscious for 30 minutes, but was revived at the Monterey hospital. He had scored four goals for his team and was the spark plug in the Del Monte attack before being injured.

Santa Barbara won the game, 13-11.

PEOPLE TALKED ABOUT

A BUSY girl is Helen Allred, with several strings to the bow of her creative endeavors. She is now in Carmel for a fortnight and spent a month here earlier in the spring, doing the finishing touches of her oil painting of California redwoods which was recently presented to the Egyptian government by the Sequoia club. She also writes; a current assignment is the "Personalities" department of Overland-Out West, for which she is to do a series of interviews. As a sort of a side-line, she is manager of Sascha Wallace, the young violinist who is to play here next month on Edward Kuster's series of Golden Bough matinees.

Her canvas, "Apples" was hung in the recent Santa Cruz and Oakland exhibits. A reproduction of the redwoods painting—the original was already on its way to Egypt when we talked to the artist—shows a highly appreciative study of the majestic forest monarchs, the stately boles lost in dusky verdure, a piercing arrow of sunlight falling into a small clearing. Last month there was a presentation dinner in San Francisco, with Miss Allred one guest of honor, the Honorable Ali Fuad Toulba, Egyptian consul in San Francisco, the other. Elliott Epsteen, vice-president of the Redwood club and attorney of the Redwood Empire Association, made the speech presenting to Egypt the painting executed by the young California artist.

Now that that's over, Miss Allred is particularly interested in the articles she is to do on outstanding California personalities. Overland-Out West is to feature this department—Miss Allred got the commission partly on the strength of an excellent interview with Harr Wagner, to whose wife she was formerly private secretary, which she sold them some time ago. This magazine, as you all know, has rich California associations; represents, as no other magazine has, the real literary tradition of the west coast. The old Overland Monthly was founded about 67 years ago, with Bret Harte as first editor, and such illustrious names associated with it as Mark Twain, Charles Warren Stoddard, Ina Coolbrith, John Muir, Joaquin Murietta, Robert Louis Stevenson, Jack London, Wallace Irwin, Gertrude Atherton, Ambrose Bierce, James Hopper, George Sterling, Edwin Markham, George Wharton James, and many others. Out West was founded in 1894 by Charles F. Lummis and for many years stood for the best in literature and science in the Southwest. Several years ago the two publications, both rather tottery, merged under the editorial direction of Arthur H. Chamberlain. Traditions of the literary west are being successfully carried on, now under the management of Emerson Lewis.

ROBERT CANTWELL, author of "The Land of Plenty" and "Laugh and Lie Down" is arriving in a few days to be a guest of Lincoln Steffens for several weeks, while they go over together Cantwell's manuscript on the life of E. A. Filene, the great and progressive Boston merchant, whom Steffens knows well and to whom he devoted considerable space in his own autobiography.

OVER the last week-end Noel Sullivan entertained a house party in which the outstanding figure was Dr. Alexander Meiklejohn, that great experimental educator of University of Wisconsin, whose plan of studying the world's past in wholes, rather than piecemeal, was tried out on specially selected groups of students. This winter Dr. Meiklejohn has been conducting lecture groups around the bay area; he returns to Wisconsin soon to teach philosophy. Mrs. Meiklejohn was here with him. Others in the group were Mr. and Mrs. James Caldwell—he lectures in English at U. C.; she is the daughter of Sara Bard Field; Ben Lehman, another U. C. professor, and Betty Alexander, Noel Sullivan's accompanist.

MR. and Mrs. Cedric Head, whose charming marionette shows at Highlands Inn last month and at the Denny-Watrous Gallery last week gave many Carmelites a new feeling for the innate charm of this old traditonal play-form, left Wednesday for New York. They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Heath—Mrs. Heath is the niece of Mrs. Thomas Fisher of the Highlands—who are joining the Heads as puppeteers. During the past week the Heads and the Heaths have been in Sacramento, putting on marionette shows. They will tour extensively in the east, and may return to California for the San Diego exposition.

ETHEL ROMIG FULLER, gifted writer and poetry editor of the Portland Oregonian, who is spending several months in Carmel, has a poem in the current Good Housekeeping and one in The Ladies' Home Journal for April. The Portland "Spectator" recently published a short article in which she described her impressions of Carmel.

JUDGE Mary Barthelme of Carmel Highlands joined her friend, Jane Addams of Chicago's famed Hull House, for a week-end visit in Berkeley, where an honorary degree was conferred upon the veteran social worker along with Secretary of Labor Perkins, Herbert Hoover and Joseph Cummings Rowell, as a part of the University of California's Charter Day observances.

FOR the purpose of interviewing State Senator E. H. Tickle on his ideas for health insurance, legislation toward which he is fathering at Sacramento, Miss Mary Ross, associate editor of Survey-Graphic came all the way across the continent, spent several days at Highlands Inn, and is now carrying on her investigations at Sacramento. Results of her study of the health insurance movement in California will be published in the May Survey-Graphic. The writer is a close friend of Mrs. Roosevelt.

John S. Lane Named New SERA Engineer

Newcomer to the staff of Frederick Bechdolt, county SERA director, is John S. Lane, project engineer, with extensive engineering and technical experience, on the Owens River valley-Los Angeles aqueduct and other major projects.

Mrs. Lane will be remembered by many Carmelites as Miss Martha Faulk, who as a college student was here for a couple of summers studying with Edward Kuster in the school of the Golden Bough. She is still in Los Angeles, and will join her husband later to make their home somewhere on the peninsula. Mr. Lane is staying at present with the J. R. Sturms, in Pacific Grove.

ALLEN GRIFFIN TELLS OF RECENT WASHINGTON TRIP

At the weekly meeting of the Monterey Peninsula Soroptimist club, held Wednesday noon at Hotel San Carlos, Allen Griffin was the speaker, entertaining the group with a most interesting account of his recent sojourn in Washington. The meeting of March 20 was devoted to a musical program by Mrs. Ethel Irvine, soprano, accompanied by Mrs. Edith Anne McAlpine. Highlight of the program was a song, "I Always Will Be True," words and music of which were written by Mrs. McAlpine.

George Grafft Takes Over Newspaper Agency

Extended delivery service to cover all of Carmel and immediate vicinity was announced by George Grafft who will become Carmel agent for the San Francisco Chronicle on the first of April.

Headquarters for the Chronicle agency have been set up at the Staniford Drug Store in Carmel.

Local high school boys will be employed in the Chronicle delivery.

Annual Red Cross Conclave April 8

The annual convention of the American Red Cross is to be held in Washington, D. C., from April 8 to 11. Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace will address the conference as well as Donald R. Richberg, and many other prominent people. It will be the first time that the delegates will hear the new chairman of the American Red Cross, Admiral Cary T. Grayson, who was appointed by President Roosevelt last month. If there are any Carmelites in the east during this conference, it would be of great benefit to the local chapter if they would attend the meetings and upon their return here give a report of the convention.

Dr. Lawrence Knox has been appointed to take charge of the Carmel Red Cross first aid committee, and with able assistants there will be a first aid class started in the near future.

Mrs. Clara F. Kennedy, who is chairman of the production committee, is getting women organized to sew garments for the local needy ones and it would be greatly appreciated if anyone in Carmel who could give a day a month to sewing would call the Red Cross headquarters, telephone 382.

Pirandello Play Creates Interest

The coming production of Luigi Pirandello's "Six Characters in Search of an Author," under the direction of Beverley Wright, which is being presented by the Denny-Watrous Gallery on April 11, 12 and 13, is attracting great interest.

The play itself has had more discussion than almost any play written for the contemporary stage. It was first produced in London, and later played in America, Ireland, Argentina, Portugal, France, Norway, Czechoslovakia, and Hungary. It was first produced in Rome in 1921. The year 1922 marked the New York production, and it was produced again in 1931. The play has been translated into 15 different languages. It is considered Pirandelo's masterpiece. Luigi Pirandello has just been awarded the Nobel Prize for literature, and his plays are much in demand by amateur groups. A Berkeley Little Theatre group has just announced his "Henry IV" as its next production.

Intrigued by the glowing accounts that have come from the Berkeley Century Club, the Woman's City Club, the San Mateo high school and other places where Francisco has given his show, the Denny-Watrous Gallery offers it as an interesting variety from the music season, which will provide hilarity and examples of ingenuity which will puzzle the mind used to mystery stories.

A matinee at 2:30 will admit children and adults at popular prices.

GUILD ELECTS OFFICERS

At the meeting of Community Church Guild Wednesday evening, Mrs. Gertrude Morehouse was elected president; Mrs. Nellie Taylor, vice president; Mrs. Mabel Hart, sectary, and Mrs. Flo Holmes was re-elected treasurer. Outgoing officers are Mrs. Amy Mylar, president; Mrs. Clara Nixon, vice president, and Mrs. Gertrude Morehouse, secretary.

For the past six months guild members have each been receiving from another member, known as her "rose," periodical gifts. The "roses" revealed their identity to each other at this week's meeting, and a new set of names was drawn all around for the next six months.

Refreshments were served by a committee composed of Mrs. Jessie Askew, Mrs. Ruth Sessink, Mrs. June Delight Canoles and Mrs. La Von Dorsett.

AN OPEN FORUM

On June 4, approximately two months from now, Carmel, Monterey and Pacific Grove will vote at a joint election on the question of forming a utility district for Monterey Peninsula. Two communities may form their own district, automatically excluding the third if it votes adversely. Adverse vote of two of the three cities would defeat the proposal entirely.

A rather vigorous campaign may be expected during the next two months. Its purpose should be to present facts, not emotional reactions. The Pine Cone has maintained that the people of the community should have the privilege of deciding the issue by vote. This point has been won; we now wish to see as many facts brought out by both sides as may be, hoping, perhaps vainly, that personalities and groundless rumors will not form the bulk of campaign material.

In order that we all may study the question as fairly as possible, The Pine Cone herewith invites communications from both sides, designed to present the issues fully and clearly. Because of obvious space limitation, and because concise material is more effective, we ask that letters from prospective voters and campaign leaders be reasonable in length. We suggest that as questions occur to readers, they write them to The Pine Cone. We will endeavor to secure and print answers, over the signature of persons qualified to answer.

Near the close of the campaign, The Pine Cone will summarize the findings of the two sides and present a considered editorial opinion. At present, on the basis of facts presented, thus far, we are inclined to favor the utility district and the purchase of the Monterey Peninsula Water Works. Public ownership of water is such an old story in many parts of the country that many people served by public companies have forgotten this was ever a controversial question

It is a fairly obvious fact that water rates on this peninsula are too high; latest evidence to this effect was a water bill brought into this office for $2.50, on a house which was unoccupied for the month for which the charge was made, and which has been repeatedly checked—at the expense of the tenant—for leaks. The present campaign may at least have the valuable result of disclosing why we pay water rates generally in excess of those in other regions of California, and what, if anything, can be done about it.

We are not bigoted in our advocacy of the utility district. We do not believe all facts have been brought out yet; the proponents, thus far, have presented more convincing arguments. We, like the rest of the public, want more facts. This is an invitation, to both sides, to present them. Write to The Pine Cone.

STICK CANDY POLITICS

We are developing a political philosophy that not only invites the people, but urges them to get their noses in the public trough on the theory that someone owes them a living. It has become good politics to give the people a nice, red five-cent stick of political candy for ten cents in taxes. So long as the people can be kept ignorant of the fact that they are really paying for the candy plus about 100 per cent additional for political overhead to handle it, just so long will they clap their hands and cry for more. But a lot of good folks are getting a stomach ache from too much political candy. They are going to ask questions when they find what their candy is costing.

AT POINT LOBOS

Once having found the sea, there is no more
A need of roads, no more a need of far
Pursuit of place. Here I may find a star
As I may chance to find a shell; this shore
Defines the threshold of discovery:
As, in their ebb and flow, the tides reveal
Illimitable energies, I feel
Resurging forces that are life in me!

All roads are one within this endless stream
Of space and waters, and all stars are here
Like shells strewn on a beach; now I must stand
Amazed and yet aware, as in a dream,
Gazing on distances to find them near,
Holding all holy powers in my hand.

CARL JOHN BOSTELMANN.

Here's Looking at You

By LOIS COLLINS PALMER

WE heard a really extraordinary statement the other evening in a group where the proposed utility district was under discussion. This department is not interested in politics, but in the philosophies underlying people's words and actions. So we lift this remark from its context, for the purpose of closer examination. It was to the effect that the taxpayers of the peninsula have thrust their head, or heads, into a noose in deciding to vote on the utility district. Non-taxpayers, being numerous in some parts of the peninsula, though not in Carmel, will leap at the chance to vote for something for which not they, but the "taxpayers" will have to pay. The propertyless will see here the opportunity to lower their water rates at the expense of the propertied. This presupposes a definite and intelligent alliance of "non-taxpayers" to vote bonds for which the other fellow has to pay, through taxes.

* * *

This claim indicates a vicious and undemocratic class-division which exists in the minds, not of the non-taxpayers, but of possessors of property who would evade the privileges and responsibilities of their position.

In the first place, there is no such person as a non-taxpayer. Those who do not own property realize this, if the property-owners do not.

* * *

Before you pay taxes as such, you must acquire property, and to acquire and keep possession of property you must amass a certain amount of money. It is a privilege to own property, and the price paid for the privilege is in the form of taxes. As a result of the intensely American aspiration of the average American workingman toward home-ownership, hundreds of families on relief are —or were—their own landlords. On the other hand, hundreds of well-to-do urban families have eschewed the pleasure of owning homes in preference to the convenience and freedom from responsibility of the furnished apartment.

But that does not mean that they are not "taxpayers." The rent which they pay is based on the landlord's overhead, including taxes. The merchandise they buy is priced to absorb the merchant's taxes and still sell at a profit. Every consumer's dollar spent helps some property-owner pay taxes. That he does not actually pay the money over to a tax-collector—"realize" it—have his nose rubbed in it—does not mitigate the fact.

* * *

If by superior ability, pure luck, or chicanery, a man has amassed more money and property than his neighbor, he should recognize a certain obligation to share with the less well endowed, the less fortunate, or the more honest. Charity is not the answer, for the generous and socially-minded carry the burden for the grasping and selfish. Taxes are not collected only for the purpose of supporting a rapacious government, but also to provide public services, and some of the privileges of a fuller life to which people of definitely limited earning capacity are entitled, as well as the wealthy. Under this category are included schools, libraries, hospitals, good roads, museums, art galleries, music, parks, playgrounds —complete the list for yourself.

* * *

Organizations like the California Taxpayers Association, fathered by corporations paying the major taxes of the state and pretending to represent the small property-owner, would, if allowed free rein, rigorously limit such privileges to those most adept in wresting wealth from a nation dedicated to "equal opportunity." As all are not equally endowed, there must be some means of equalizing the returns. This means has been found in taxation, and the expenditure of money so collected for the benefit of the people as a whole. But it does not mean that the little wage-earner, with no property, does not pay his tiny proportion. He does, regardless of sales tax, gasoline taxes, or other mass levies. He pays taxes in every dollar he spends for rent, food, fuel, water and clothing.

TRY IT ON DRIVERS, TOO

While a sylph-like waistline is not a strict requirement for members of the California Highway Patrol, they nevertheless are faced with a new set of rules which if followed out should make Adonises of all of them.

With a former champion pugilist putting the officers through their paces the following ten rules have been posted for them:

Drink at least one glass of water as soon as you arise; take deep breathing exercises and calisthenics for five minutes; have for your breakfast fruit and fruit juices, and masticate your food thoroughly; eat one-half of what you now consume if you care to reduce; drink at least two quarts of water daily; participate in some kind of sport, such as: golf, handball, tennis, horseback riding, or long hikes, making the one you enjoy the most into a habit; do not indulge excessively in alcoholics or smoke too much. Be moderate in all things; do not worry. worry is one of the chief ailments affecting health; sufficient hours of sleep are necessary to restore strength to your body; if married, do not fight or argue with your wife. Be cheerful. Pleasant relationships have a marked effect on good health.

What is good for the cops should also be good for the motorists. We suggest the patrolmen have a bunch of slips printed with their rules on them and the next time they stop a motorist for a minor violation, hand him one of the slips instead of, or along with his ticket.

A FOOLISH GESTURE

About 100,000 college students and 20,000 high school pupils in this country are all set, we are advised, to stage a nation-wide strike against war on April 12, at 11 o'clock.

The strike is scheduled to last one hour, during which protest meetings will be under the auspices, we see in the daily press, of the National Council of Methodist Youth; the Middle Atlantic Division of the Interseminary Movement; the Student League for Industrial Democracy and the National Students' Leageu.

Like so many other protests the students will waste their time. If they are really interested in preventing war, rather than staging an exhibition, we suggest that they spend their time in studying the underlying causes of war. Their gesture may give some publicity to the strike leaders but it will not mean anything at all when the band begins to play. No newspaper in the world is more anxious to develop international peace than The Pine Cone but that goal will be reached only through intelligence, patience and justice applied to all problems. The dissipation of prejudice, ignorance and injustice require more than a student strike, however well meaning the mushy-headed exhibitionists are.

SHOTS AT RANDOM

There is no tragedy in growing old, but there is tragedy in growing old without means of support.

* * * *

One of these days some politician is going to find an answer to some public problem and nobody will know what to do with it.

An interesting experiment at a recent radio show was that of lighting an electric light bulb by passing wireless waves through a man's head. Such experiments should aid in determining the relative conductivity of solid ivory and a vacuum.

200-Ton Malpaso Bridge Moved 30 Feet to Make Way for New Span

ONE of engineering's most intricate jobs of bridge juggling was successfully consummated a few miles south of Carmel this week, when the ancient span over Malpaso creek, on the Carmel-San Simeon highway was boosted bodily over about 30 feet. Rather, the south end was moved to this extent; the north end pivoted on rollers and ended in approximately the same location.

Thomas J. Doyle, who, with his partner, Theodore Johanns, has the contract for building the new $25,000 concrete bridge which will replace the antiquated one, says that only once or twice before has he heard of such a job being done. The bridge crosses a deep, precipitous canyon, and it was more practicable and less expensive to move the old bridge than to use a detour down the canyon and build a temporary bridge.

Traffic was tied up only periodically on Monday, while the moving was in process. A powerful diesel engine and a couple of hoists were used for power, along with an intricate system of pulleys which rendered the project safe and comparatively simple, from an engineering standpoint, though it looked perilous. The bridge was reinforced with heavy timbers, and the engineers say it is really safer now than before they moved it. It weighs about 200 tons, which is some weight to move, even by engineering magic.

The new bridge will start from a point approximately 30 feet seaward from the present north end, and run straight across, by means of a 117-foot arch span and three approach spans at each end, to the spot on the south bank where the old bridge now rests. There will be about five feet clearance between the south ends of the two bridges. The new one will have a 24-foot roadway and pedestrian sidewalks at either side. Work of pouring concrete will start this week, and the job will be finished in July, about two months ahead of contract time. Two daylight shifts are working.

I. T. Johnson is the state resident engineer, on the ground to see that the work proceeds according to specifications.

The old bridge once graced the Watsonville road over the Pajaro river and was moved several years ago to its location south of Carmel.

Panoramic Mexico Subject of Talk

A PANORAMIC view of Mexico in transition was given by Mrs. Margaret Grant before the current events section of the Woman's club Wednesday morning, in spite of obvious difficulties of bringing her material strictly up to date in face of strict press censorship. She placed her finger upon Calles, the president-maker, as Mexico's "master mind," and one whom she believes has truly the welfare of his country at heart. She traced extensively the movement of "Mexico for the Mexicans," which is in harmony, she pointed out, with world-wide intensification of the nationalistic spirit, and resentment of foreign exploitation. So subtly that it is difficult to express effective resentment, and so that there is no redress, foreign interests are being gently and firmly "squeezed out." What is more painful to the Mexicans themselves, Mrs. Grant pointed out, is that after the "liquidation" of the large landholders the process of transferring the holdings of the middle-class owners is now in process, through confiscatory taxation, and for the benefit of the peasants.

The speaker commented on the courageous action of the new president, Cardenas, in also "liquidating" great "foreign club" gambling dives in and near Mexico City.

Contrary to the expectation of the Spanish conquistadores, who had a definite policy of mingling the European and native Indian stocks, the white blood is not predominating in the modern nation, but the "mystical, artistic, not energetic" Indian blood has put its stamp ineradicably upon the race, the speaker said.

GUS ENGLUND PREPARES FOR ANOTHER OPERATION

Friends visiting Gus Englund, long-time Carmel police chief, at Letterman hospital in San Francisco, have been surprised to see how well he is standing up under the long illness and series of leg amputations which have been performed to check the insidious infection following a foot injury last December. "The chief," as he will probably always be known in Carmel, is obviously receiving the best of care, and there are hopes that his rugged constitution will enable him ultimately to throw off the infection. He is resting and gaining strength now for a probable third operation.

During the past week-end he was visited by Police Chief Robert Norton and Winsor Josselyn. Officer Earl Wermuth also visited him recently.

James Hopper Damage Suit Is Compromised

Suit by a noted Carmel author and his wife for $45,510 damages from the Pacific Greyhound lines began in Superior Judge H. G. Jorgensen's court before a jury in Salinas this week, and before progressing very far reached a compromise by which the defendant will receive upward of $2000.

James M. Hopper, who has written books, contributes regularly to magazines, and has had a varied career as reporter, war correspondent, French instructor and lawyer, brought suit after an accident eight miles north of Salinas on November 30, when his machine and a bus collided.

Mrs. Mattie Hopper sought $35,000 damages for injuries which she allegeldly sustained, while Hopper asked for $10,000 for loss of his wife's companionship. The remaining $510 was for hospital bills and repairs to Hopper's machine.

Giants Finally Slay Shamrocks

Club Standings

	W.	L.	Pct.
Shamrocks	4	1	.800
Pilots	3	2	.600
Giants	2	3	.400
Blues	1	4	.200

The lucky Shamrocks finally fell before the fierce onslaughts of the Giants in the Abalone league last Sunday at the Carmel Woods diamond. The score was so close that the interest never lagged right up to the final frame. In the last half of the ninth the Giants scored twice to make the tally 10 to 9.

By Ford was on the mound for the Shamrocks and Spike Tremayne took 'em behind the bat. The Giants pitched "Rosey" Henry and Otto Bardarson caught.

In the first game the Blues again took the tail end with a score of 3 to 10, the big end going to the Pilots. The winners had Dick Masten flinging the sphere to be caught by Fred Godwin. The Blues had Steve Marble heaving and Fred Warren grabbing. Staniford, Talbert Josselyn and Ralph Tuck umpired.

Giant Iguana Shown at Oliver's Art Store

One of the interesting sights to be seen on the Peninsula just now is a genuine iguana giant lizard, or miniature dinosaur from the Galapagos Islands, which is being proudly displayed at Oliver's Mission Art and Curio store in Monterey.

The animal is nearly four feet long, and is scientifically traced as a direct descendent of the dinosaur. The animal, being shown together with a vast collection of over 7000 cactus plants of all varieties, flytrap plants, giant shells, etc., has attracted throngs of peninsula people this week.

The iguana came to Oliver's through a wager. Certain especially treasured stones of Oliver's were greatly desired by two Stanford scientists. Oliver would neither sell nor trade them, but laughingly told the men that if they would bring him a dinosaur or descendant of a dinosaur, he would give them an even trade.

Months later, to Oliver's amazement, the scientists returned from Galapagos with the reptile, and the trade was sportingly made.

Program Completed for Eustace Dinner

Representative attendance of Carmel Business Association members and their friends is expected at the dinner-business meeting and 90th birthday celebration for J. A. Eustace, charter member of the association, which will be held next Tuesday evening at 7:15 at Pine Inn. This is the first of a series of get-together dinners, by means of which the board of directors hopes to strengthen the business association, and encourage it to take a prominent part in community affairs.

Harold Nielsen, who will preside at the dinner, is arranging an interesting program, which will include a talk by Mr. Eustace, musical selections by Cal Winters and his instrumental trio, and other entertainment. There will be a short business session, but the meeting will be mostly social. Advance reservations are being taken at Pine Inn, or by Jack McKay at Vining's Market.

VISIT SUNSET SCHOOL

Dr. and Mrs. George Freeland of San Jose were in Carmel this week for the purpose of visiting Sunset school. Dr. Freeland, who is head of the department of education at San Jose state teachers' college, wished to show to his wife and the friend who accompanied them, the auditorium and art room which have attracted admiring comment throughout the state.

Women of Two Churches Hold Joint Luncheon

An example of the numerous interests which Community church and All Saints church share in common was the luncheon at All Saints' recently, at which women of the other church were guests. Purpose of the get-together was to make bandages for the leper colony in the Cameroun in which women of both congregations are interested. The 35 workers present, 12 of whom were members of Community church auxiliary, succeeded in rolling over a hundred bandages during the session.

Before lunch the doxology was sung and a short prayer was given by Rev. Austin B. Chinn. After the meal was over Mrs. John W. Dickinson, president of All Saints Guild, spoke a few words of welcome to the guests. Miss Agnes Williston gave a gracious speech of appreciation in behalf of Community church auxiliary, of which she is president.

Success Meets Joint Bridge and Tea Party

A pleasant and highly successful affair was the joint bridge tea of the Woman's club and the Girl Scouts held Monday afternoon at the Girl Scout house. Eighteen tables were reserved for the game and to this number were added a dozen guests who came in for tea at the close of the afternoon. The room was aglow with Scotch broom, most effective against the dark woodwork, as arranged by Mrs. Anne Chidister and Mrs. J. W. Stilwell.

Mrs. Osborn Johnson was chairman of the committee on arrangements, which also included Miss Clara Hinds, Mrs. Stilwell, Mrs. Chidester, Mrs. John M. Dickinson and Miss Ginevra Pierce. Miss Hinds and Mrs. Dickinson poured tea; serving was done by a group of the girls scouts: June Clark, Margaret Dorrance, Alison Stilwell, Sue Chapman and Kathryn Hamm.

Many Mills Students Enjoy Carmel Vacations

"Going to Carmel," was the universal retort to the question at Mills College, "Where are you going during spring recess?" In fact the college proper recently stated that the Carmel city fathers were contemplating changing "Carmel" to "Mills Town"—temporarily, of course—in honor of the visiting Mills students.

The list of those visiting here this week includes, among many others: Virginia Clotfelter and Betty Johnston of Berkeley, Harriet MacConnaughey of Alameda, Jane Taylor of San Mateo Park, Patricia Fallows of Saratoga, who, incidentally, is running for president at the next associated student election; Marjorie Guild of Yerington, Nevada; Penny Frederick of Hollywood, and Georgia Thomas of Arizona.

In another party at Carmel are Eleanor Hadly of Seattle, Washington; Virginia Peters of Boise, Idaho, and Mollie Grounds of Hawaii.

Section Meetings for Woman's Club Listed

Woman's club section meetings for the first week in April are as follows: The book section will meet on Wednesday, April 3, at 10 o'clock at the Girl Scout house. Mrs. E. J. Turkington, of San Francisco, will review "Retreat from Glory," by R. H. Bruce Lockhart. Mrs. Turkington is connected with the book section of the San Francisco Woman's City club, and chairman of the travel round table.

The Garden Section will have its first meeting for the month on Thursday, April 4, at 10 o'clock at the home of Mrs. I. N. Ford, Eleventh and Junipero. Mrs. Morris J. Wild will read a paper on the "Fragrant Garden."

The bird study group will meet each Thursday morning, and those wishing to attend should get in touch with Laidlaw Williams, the leader.
